Community College Average Cost to Attend

The average cost to educate a resident full-time community or technical college student for the 2015-16 academic year is $7,126. Students pay an average of $3,056 in tuition toward this cost. The remaining $4,070 is an "opportunity pathway" provided by the State and is funded by state taxes and other sources. The amounts shown are averages for a full-time, resident student. The actual tuition a student pays will vary due to credit load, residency status and other factors.
MESA program helps students find academic direction and success in STEM

Dr. Roseann Berg honed her skills as a college professor and academic adviser while working at Foothill College in Los Altos Hills, California. As a first generation student herself, Roseann found she could easily relate with students who are also among the first in their families to go to college and unsure how to navigate the educational system on their own.

As the new director of Olympic College’s Mathematics, Engineering, Science and Achievement (MESA) program, Roseann now has the opportunity to do this work full-time.

MESA wasn’t around when Roseann was in college. As a first-generation student, who started at Edmonds Community College, she likely would have qualified for this program which seeks to increase the number of students who transfer to four-year universities to complete STEM related degrees.

MESA’s primary demographic is students in underrepresented groups, which, in fields like engineering and computer science, includes females.

“We focus our resources and services on students who are underrepresented and help them get to the point where they finish their education here at OC and successfully transfer to a four-year university,” she said. “We’re working to change the demographics, so that one day, these populations won’t be underrepresented in STEM fields.”

The MESA program supports students through a multi-pronged approach that builds a strong sense of community along the way.

MESA offers Academic Excellence Workshops (AEW), college orientation, academic advising and transfer planning. This often also includes helping students decide which schools to consider based on their major, financial needs and geographic factors.

In addition to academic services, MESA also works with students on choosing the right career path. They go on field trips, invite guest speakers and leverage their relationships with industries to place students in job shadow and help them secure internships.

MESA also helps students cultivate soft skills through resume, personal statement, workplace culture, and employment interview workshops.

They partner with programs like the Tutoring Center to place students in part-time jobs where they can earn some extra income without having to leave campus.

The MESA Center, located in the Science and Technology building, offers a computer lab and space where students can meet and form study groups. Roseann works closely with faculty members like Chemistry Professor Allison Phayre to identify topics of study each week and offer practice problems not covered in the classroom.

"MESA has proven to be very effective for my students. In addition to the increase in assessment scores for students who participate in the study sessions and tutoring, I have also seen confidence in their career path increase," Professor Allison commented.

One of her former students secured a paid research internship at the Manchester lab doing shelfish research. MESA connected Allison with another student to provide coaching for a summer internship interview in a bioengineering lab at the University of Washington.

"She got the job, and enjoyed it so much she began working in the lab as an undergraduate researcher when she transferred to UW. MESA gave them the resources to find and prepare for those opportunities, as well as the confidence to apply," Allison said.

This school year, Roseann hopes to increase enrollment in the program which has about 70 active students and space for close to 100. She is spending time with current students learning about their needs, while figuring out how best to recruit new students.

Perhaps her greatest recruiting tool is current and past students who attest to the impact MESA has on their education.

Ekaterina Berulava is a former OC MESA student who is now enrolled at WSU. She credits MESA for helping her decide on academic and career paths. She earned scholarships, borrowed books and calculators and even served as a judge at the Washington State Engineering and Science Fair.

"Being a Judge showed just how crucial it is to support young generations of future scientists, engineers, or health professionals," she said. "It is at that age when the first spark of passion for science and engineering starts. Events like that encourage young generations to join STEM related fields."

Alessandra Hughes is a current MESA student who is planning to transfer to WWU. After earning a 4.0 in her first quarter as a MESA student, she was overwhelmed by the amount of support and encouragement she received from fellow students and long-time staff member Bernie Sablan. Alessandra recently worked a MESA outreach event and enthusiastically encourages others to also take advantage of all that MESA has to offer.

"I say definitely go for it. MESA is full of students who are all going through the same thing. I’ve taken classes from virtually every math instructor at the college and so have the other MESA students," she says. “They help you figure out how to study and do your homework. I think it is a very valuable thing to be a part of here at OC.”

ACADEMY FOR LIFELONG LEARNING
ON THE PENINSULAS

The Western Lecture Series began a transition this fall to Academy for Lifelong Learning (A.L.L.) on the Peninsulas, a branch of Bellingham’s acclaimed and long-established A.L.L. program. This transformation brings a gradual growth and broader range of enlightening educational programming – lectures, courses and excursions – over the next few months for adults living on the Peninsulas.

A.L.L. program content is produced by volunteers who develop courses, excursions, events and other programs. Instructors are recruited from a diverse pool of college/university faculty, faculty emeritus, and experts in various fields and professions.

This is an exciting evolution for learning opportunities on the Peninsulas. Look for more information to come over the next weeks and months.

The SEA Discovery Center is a hands-on facility where we combine science, education and an aquarium.

Open to the public:
Thursday through Sunday, 11 a.m. - 4 p.m.
