Job Fair
Employer Showcase

2020 Guide to Local & Regional Employers
Provided by the Olympic College Career Center
A Message from the Career Center Staff

This year commemorates the 27th annual Job Fair hosted by the Career Center. While it is unfortunate to have to postpone the fair until November, we’re excited for the opportunity to explore virtual options. In an effort to keep employers connected to our students and community, we created this virtual catalog of employers who had already signed up to participate in the fair and who hope to still participate in November.

The Job Fair is designed for students, graduates, and community members to connect with Puget Sound region employers to learn about employment opportunities, as well as cultivate networks to carry them through their professional and personal lives. Collectively, the Job Fair is one of more than 50 career development and job search activities, workshops, and presentations coordinated by the Career Center that happens during the academic year.

Our team is also responsible for coordinating successful industry-specific employer panels for the professional-technical programs offered by the College. These panels bring over 60 business professionals to campus each year to share industry trends, recruitment practices, and workplace endurance skills with students and graduates.

To our students and community members: We wish you the best in your job search. Remember, the Career Center is ready to help you create an employment plan and strengthen your job search skills for the 21st century.

To our employers and organizations: We extend our appreciation for your collaboration in these efforts, which is aligned with the Career Center’s mission of “Bringing employers and students together for a well-trained workforce.”

Career Center staff are available via email (CareerCenter@olympic.edu) and in virtual office hours via Zoom. The link to our virtual lobby and available times can be found on the OC Career Center website.

We will also post updates regarding the Job Fair in November 2020 on the OC Career Center website and to our Facebook page.

Finding Work in a Virtual Job Market

By the Career Center Staff

As businesses in Washington start to reopen, some employers are considering the option to keep employees working remotely for the foreseeable future. What does this mean for you as a job seeker?

Well, not too much has changed for the initial application process. You will still apply for jobs online, but the substance of your resume and cover letter could use some relevant updates. When evaluating applicants, employers who are considering keeping employees remote will look for computer program proficiencies, evidence of managing oneself, and strong organizational skills. You may already be proficient in Microsoft Word and Excel, but how familiar are you with Microsoft Teams, Zoom, and Basecamp? A basic understanding of some remote collaboration software could set you apart from other applicants. And you can easily learn about these programs for free online!

Next is the virtual interview. If you’re taking online classes, you may already have some experience with video conferencing and digital communications. But unlike your classes, you are expected to dress in business attire and present yourself in a professional environment. Wearing the right outfit isn’t just for the interviewer; it can help get you into the right frame of mind.

You should also have a practice virtual meeting with someone you know! If you know what time of day you’ll be interviewing and are sure of what you’ll wear, then practice at that time and wear that outfit. Depending on the time of day, the sun could be shining through a window directly on your face and wash you out; but you don’t want the sun glaring from behind you either. Or perhaps your outfit blends too much with your skin tone or the background. Make sure you feel good about what you are wearing.

Limit distractions. Place pets in a different room. Make sure you are in a clutter-free area. Position computer with a blank wall in the background or a professional setting such as bookshelves. And once the interview is over, make sure you remember to send a thank you letter to your interviewer. Our Career Services Specialist is available to have that practice interview with you, so make an appointment.

Lastly, you should prepare for the hiring process to move much slower than in the past. Businesses are facing many challenges, and while hiring may be a priority, it may not be the top priority. Keep applying to jobs, and don’t wait to hear from one employer before you apply to work for another. As always, the Career Center staff are available to help you with resumes, cover letters, mock interviews, thank you letters and more. Schedule your appointment today!
